

Friday 22nd May 2020

Transient Art

Transient art is 'art that's moveable'. It is the use of any materials (natural or man-made) to create a picture, pattern or structure; it is a process of creating with loose parts and no permanent end product; indoors or outdoors.

Andy Goldsworthy is a British sculptor who enjoyed creating transient art.

Here are some examples of his work.

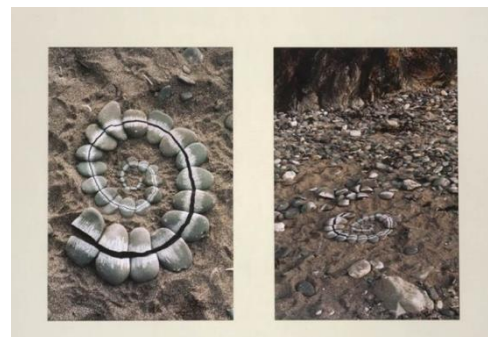

Started Climbing

Ammonite

Forest Path

Clearly Broken Pebbles Scratched With White

For Art today (or over half term) have a go at creating your own transient art inspired by Andy Goldsworthy and give them a title.

I would love to see your creations if you would like to send in a photo.

Miss Bamber