Good Morning Oaks (from Ms. Pickard again).

First of all, I apologise for the mix-up yesterday. Bank holiday Friday tipped me out of sequence and of course I wanted you all to finish writing your final edit instructions about the Trojan horse before starting immersion and a new writing sequence today.

Well done everyone who managed to complete the Spartan helmet last week. I have seen some fabulous results! It was a tricky task but well worth persevering to the end.

Have you found my comments on completed work in purple mash yet? If you click on my work and class -oaks you can view feedback here. Don't forget to check your alerts too.

Also, watch out for story-time with Ms.P Sound-files which will be coming soon. I really miss reading the class story so I will add some Greek myths to the home learning section so that you can gather the cushions, get comfortable and listen to my voice once again!

Here are your activities for today (you can do them in any order).

Reading for 20 minutes – THE MOST IMPORTANT!

English

I have read a completed example of the Trojan horse instructions today which certainly conveyed the tone of a strong, leading commander. I look forward to reading more from other pupils and being transported back in time to a gathering of an enormous army of Greeks listening carefully to the sequence of steps needed to trick the Trojans.

Maths

Year 5 and 6 don't miss your 2-part Greek-themed Maths today. I enjoyed planning the lesson. I hope that you enjoy it too.

History

Today we will continue our timeline work in History. Create your timeline carefully and add illustrations or imported images to bring events to life.
